SEVENTH DAYS

2011 GUIDE TO READERS' PICKS

OMG, you're reblogging. We thought we'd hit it big last year when nearly 4400 people responded to our annual best-of survey, but that year, we heard from more than 8400 of you — that's almost 1 percent of Vermont's population!

We like to keep you on your toes, so for the ninth annual Seventh Days survey, we added a bunch of new categories, some of them better received than others. Only a handful of people felt strongly enough to vote for Vermont's best side-munch, for example, but everyone had an opinion about the best creamer stand. Can't say we're surprised.

You extolled the virtues of your favorite soft-serve providers while cutting down the competition with a nerdy enthusiasm unparalleled in other categories. THINK BROTHERS PIZZA & GRILL, in Colchester, one of you declared, won 10 percent milk-lic, "it's like most creamer stands at 5 percent." About HORSE FARM's maple cream-on in Montpelier, someone wrote, "Real maple syrup, people! Not cut with Aunt J like some RTV places!" One of you refused to name any particular stand. "That's like picking a favorite child!" you protested.

Speaking of children, we weren't surprised that so many of you fed children don't belong in restaurants, but we were surprised at the vitriol with which you expressed your desire to bomb them from all existing establishments forever. When asked about the best restaurant to take the kids, scores of you answered, "Anywhere I'm not." One of you took the opportunity to attack the little ones' character: "Kids are expensive and ungrateful." Another wanted to send them to "The [post]nursery" at the bottom of Lake Champlain.

Maybe it's the contrast in us, but your collective self-righteousness on this issue kind of made us want to cart hundreds of babies to your favorite restaurant, just to watch you yawn.

The only other category that inspired such rage was best Internet service provider. Many of you replied with some variation on "Anyone but [insert name of service provider here]!" "Do we have a choice?" you barked. "Fuck them all!" wrote more than a few of you. Perhaps that explains why so many Seventh Days readers opt for a different kind of provider: "My nimbler."

Many of you thought it was hilarious that we would talk about your favorite bookstores, record stores, movie rental shops and photo shops. "What is this, 2003?" you scoffed. "What's a book?" "What's a record?" you joked. Over and over. We hear ya. But these places do still exist. And even in 2011, local brick-and-mortar stores are still winning Seventh Days over Amazon and Netflix — we'll just barely over Netflix.

Old favorites, such as CITY MARKET, HIGHER GROUND and WPTZ weather gal TONY HESNER have held on to their Seventh Days year after year, and 2011 was no exception. We thought about creating a new category called "Always a first-place ad, Never a Bride" to honor longtime runners-up such as RADIO DEAN (first small local music bummer), THE POINT (best radio station) and, of course, NEIGHLY LIVING MARKET (best natural foods market), which this year lost to City Market by an agonizing 12 votes. It's up to you, dear voters, to see if, next year, these "bridesmaids" will get their turn in the spotlight.

Congratulations to all the winners — and almost-winners — and thanks to everyone who voted. You're an opinionated and loyal bunch, and that's why we love you.

Best Ethnic Market Thai Phat Market Burlington.

Get your unusual dry goods, sweets and more at this authentic Asian supermarket. You'll find fish, quail, goat, chicken feet and all types of candy and dried fruit.

SPREADSHEET: Germany's mercantile Bay of Asia has been your market? ANTHONY CHAN, MANAGER: Many college students are very curious about the fruits. Americans buy dragonfruit, lychee and durian but they buy more mangos because they are sweet.

FRANCIS CANNON

Nearly a decade into the Dryden, it seemed like time for a shakeup. We offered you a slew of new categories, and in return you give us some surprising new winners.

Perhaps what's old is new again, at least in the case of the WAFSIDE RESTAURANT & BAKERY. The 59-year-old Berlin diner snagged second place for best breakfast outside Chittenden County. On the opposite end of the age spectrum, FARMHOUSE TAP & GRILL was its second. Dayne for best burger. At just slightly more than a year old, the Burlington gastropub was ineligible for best new restaurant, which it would have handsily won. Instead, CHURCH & MAIN, which opened last October, was that honor. Outside Chittenden County, the new resto Dayne went to SALE, the Montpelier cafe that former Seven Days food editor Suzanne Podsiadlowski opened with her husband, chef Dan Green, last November.

Sustainability may be its own reward, but this year, you were eager to share the leftover laurels. Vermont Fresh Network's member LEONARDO'S PIZZA scored its third consecutive win for best pizza delivery. BITE ME ORGANIC PIZZA, with its creative specialty pies, came in second, sweeping last year's runner-up, DOMINOS, by only two votes.

To shine a light on local producers, we eliminated last year's award for best Vermont specialty food in favor of more specific categories. Perhaps GRAB CREAMERY was simply too big not to win best Vermont cheese, but SHELBOURNE FARM wasn't far behind — thanks to some incredibly enthusiastic fans. One of you endorsed Shelburne Farm Tractor Cheddar thus: "I'll put bar on your chest." Maybe it's time for Vermonters to claim the title "cheddarheads" from Wisconsin. Another 5 Shelburne business topped the best winery voting in Chittenden County: SHELBOURNE WINERY.

GANESMAN won best farmers market vendor, with ROCK'S ROOT BEER its runner-up, and also recaptured second place for best ethnic cuisine (non-Asian) outside Chittenden County. Speaking of the largest continent, a pair of Asian markets ran neck-and-neck for the first-ever best ethnic market. Dayne: GO ASIAN MARKET EATERY was only five points behind THAI PHAT MARKET, just down North Street.

What else was new? Read on to see if your favorites made the cut.

Salt

Montpelier

Suzanne Posnauer
and Dan Green

Suzanne Posnauer and Dan Green opened Salt in November 2010 in the Stone Street space previously occupied by Rowen, the former Seven Days food editor and her chef husband to change their eclectic menu every three weeks with themes ranging from Aloisio specialties to Thomas Jefferson's gardens at Monticello.

SEVEN DAYS: Are there any themes you planned, then abandoned?
SUZANNE POSNAUER, CO-OWNER: I wanted to start off with themes that would be broadly appealing to people. We'd like to do a medieval menu for which we might make blintzes. We probably won't make caramel stuffed with sheep like the medieval foodsters. I don't think we can purchase local camel—at least in enough quantity. The chef really seldom the Great Depression menu so all have to do some work to get him to agree to that. Good that I am. It's eventually going to do a Love of the Ring theme. See.

General Manager
at Church & Main

Location location location. Since opening last fall, this lushly appointed spot has gone through at least three chefs, but the kitchen is clearly doing something right with its hearty portions of risotto, calzone and steak frites. The epic wine and spirits list keeps the bar lively.

SEVEN DAYS: What do you see most of anniversaries, first dates or first birthdays?
DEVYN DUNN, GENERAL MANAGER: We get quite a mix here. You definitely notice the blind dates, the Match.com dates. And then you get the kind of meetings that you question. The bar is very open and someone might ask, "So what's your wife doing tonight?" "Oh, she's out of town" and see a lot of that.

Best Creemee Stand

Burlington Bay Market & Café

Burlington

There's no doubt that creemee isn't the only place in Vermont that offers made-in-Vermont, but many of you say it's the best. Of course, the location helps. If you stop there for a creemee, you'll be on the way to or from the lake. Best up a hand, ice cream and hot fudge, nuts and cookie dough all at once, and order your dog a "doggie dish"—ice cream with a canine treat.

SEVEN DAYS: How is your doggie ice cream different from the ice cream you serve humans?

JILL CASBERRY, MANAGER: The vanilla ice cream in our puppy parlors is the same, but the dog treats are made with organic ingredients by local bakers from Vermont Doggie Treats.

Best Ethnic Cuisine (Non-Asian) (Outside Chittenden County) Frida's Taqueria & Grill

Stowe

Authentic Mexican spots recently began proliferating in northern Vermont, but when Frida's Taqueria & Grill opened in 2008, fresh south-of-the-border fare was difficult to come by. Two years on, the Stowe restaurant has picked up its first Sevens award for its much-loved tacos, fun and smoked-cuck mode.

SEVEN DAYS: How have you sold people on lengua (beef tongue)? TACOS! JACK FICKETT, CO-OWNER: Sometimes you can tell people, "Hey, you've never had it, but you're gonna pay $3.75. If you don't like it, what's the worst that can happen?" We also guarantee to do our food—if you don't like it, you don't pay for it. The majority of people who order it have already been to a Sevens event in Mexico that owns it. People who are in the know go for it.

Best Caterer Sugarsnap

Burlington

This purveyor of prepared-to-eat specialties has added two locations to its empire this year: a cafe at ECHO Lake Aquarium and Science Center and Sugarsnap at Technology Park, which is now home (oh yes, for the company's prep kitchen and catering service). The produce comes from Sugarsnap's own garden at the Burlington Intercity, but the menu spans the globe, from pork empanadas to Thai peanut chicken skewers.

SEVEN DAYS: What do you do when someone requests food that's wildly out of season for an event? LAURA KANYA, EXECUTIVE CHEF: Of course, if somebody is really adamant on it, we will try and figure it out. But we also stress our philosophy of seasonal and local and the best product is within season. Sometimes for things like blueberries, we are able to freeze them and use those all winter long. We'll pursue local and use it all winter long for peaches.

Boyden Valley Winery
Cambridge

Generations of the Boyden family have presided over this idyllic-looking Cambridge farm for more than 100 years, producing milk, maple syrup and beef. Several years ago, David Boyden began making wines from cool-climate grapes — such as Pinot noir and Seyval blanc — that are rarely polished every year.

SEVEN DAYS: What kinds of wines do you drink when you're not drinking your own? DAVID BOYDEN, OWNER AND WINEMAKER: I tend to like European wines more than New World wines, wines from France and Italy. Our wines are modeled in a European style — balanced but not super-jammy or too spicy in oak. So the wines that are really good with food.

A Thai food cart outside Montpelier county courthouse Wilaiwan Phanong and her husband Tim Aazam serve colorful spicy food that fuses traditional Thai street food with the cuisine of Phanong's native region near the Laos border. They sold out two orders at lunchtime every weekday — such as coconut curry or chicken pork salad — and almost always sell out within two hours.

SEVEN DAYS: What is the most difficult ingredient to find here in Vermont? TIM AAZAM, CO-PROPRIETOR: I would say the hardest to get is galangal, a Thai ginger. It's similar to the Asian ginger we get in the store but it has a much different taste. The thing with [cat herbs] that food is that you can't really get it here. In Thailand everything is fresh, so to eat it right away. The ingredients there tastes different, the flavors are different. It's just a soft thing. It's really hard to recreate. The food here but we try to get as close as we can.

ARTS, ENTERTAINMENT & RECREATION

When it closed two months ago after a seven-year run, Montpelier's LANGDON STREET CAFE left a lot of broken hearts in central Vermont. So it's no surprise the place ranked in the most votes for best small local music hotspot outside Chittenden County. Unfortunately, we can't give our posthumous awards — where would they put their Dwyer stickers? — so this little shout-out will have to do. Langdon Street, we loved you, too!

Inside Chittenden County the competition in that category was stiff. Only 27 votes separated this year's winner, HEXTAX, from runner-up RADIO BEAN. When it comes to large live music venues, there's just no competing with HIGHER BIDDING, though the PLATIN launched into the runner-up spot this year with nearly double the votes of last year's runner-up, Neat's.

Everybody loves dancing at CLUB HETTERHOME, especially at Retrozone, the weekly 80s night, but some of you prefer a little more privacy. "At home naked" was a surprisingly common response. "Anywhere with my book group" was more puzzling.

Singer-songwriter JOSHUA PANDE had a bit of the always-a-blessed-and-a-curse going on this year, coming in twice as runner-up, once for best up-and-coming performer — which MYRA PLUM took home for the second year, despite the fact that the soulful diva has already, well, up and gone — and once for best assigned civilian band. And kudos to the WINGSLIKE CIVILIANS, whom you almost took best assigned Vermont band and best Vermont hip-hop act.

HARRY BLISS had a strong showing in the best comedian category, but ultimately the Dwyer vote went to JAMES KOSCHALKO, Vermont's cartoonist laureate. Fancier KATHARINE MONTETRIAM held down her title as best visual artist for the second year, with past winner BUSBAR close behind. But we're really going to hand it to CHRIS BOKHALLIAN, who has won a Dwyer for best Vermont fiction writer for two straight years. How does he do it, and where does he keep them all?

The other perennial winner in this section, of course, is the unaltered best weekend getaway in Vermont, the town of STOWE — and the spa (STONEPLAKE) and lodge (TRAPP FAMILY LODGE) of Stowe that came in second and third, respectively, this year. What do they do up there in that magical land? Whatever it is, we want to try it.

Montpelier

This Capitol City-based collective embodies the spirit of Montpelier with an exact roster of talent that runs the gamut, from hip-hop to indie pop to experimental rock, and any number of stops in between.

SEVEN DAYS that video really got the radio star? If so, with which agency and in which room of the man's loft? ICEDY BAKER: On August 1, 1981, the Radio Star faced his own death. Video, in a desperate attempt to build hype, took the credit. Colonel Mustard was keen to the play and threatened to cut Baker to the growing media frenzy. Video's estranged partner, Miss Peacock, was hired to protect Baker's integrity, and offered the great colonel with the confectionery in the conservatory. Radio Star was formally buried, arranged the butterfly, although he is alive and well and resides on a remote island with Tropic and Biggie. Their forthcoming album, featuring appearances by all three A-Way Calypso Christmas will be released on State & Main Records. Pre-orders available now at stateandmainrecords.com.

Best Unsigned Vermont Band & Best Vermont Hip-Hop Artist The Linguistic Civilians

Vermont's recent hip-hop renaissance has given rise to a startling number of high-quality MCs (like and crews), among the more promising was the Linguistic Civilians, whose Jurassic 5-inspired jams shake both minds and hearts.

SEVEN DAYS: Who put the "bump" in the bump (ahh bump is ah bump)? Subquestion: Who put the "rnm" in the rnm? (aahh-rnm-ding-ding-ding?)

MONTY BURNS: the Linguistic Civilians, because we made your baby fall in love with you

DAN BOLLES

Best Museum (Outside Chittenden County) Montshire Museum

Newrich

At the Montshire Museum of Science, they trade you into learning, and they're not ashamed to admit it. They make you think you're just having fun — study gets stripped to your hands and knees as you crawl up a sloped wall — when actually you're learning about insects. They give you a "tongue gun" and invite you to launch it, whereupon you can't learn about them without catching their prey. Turn out, when science is hands-on — and involves sweetest contraptions such as "The Hill," a 250-foot outdoor watercourse decked out with adjustable mini dams and sluices — it's easy to learn.

SEVEN DAYS: What's the coolest scientific fact you've learned from a Montshire exhibit lately?

BOB DANIELS, EXHIBITS DIRECTOR: Individual ants can live as long as three years. We have a leaf cutter ant exhibit that is quite popular. The ants don't actually eat the leaves we give them, but rather they cut them up and use them to grow fungus gardens that supply food for the colony.

Best Independent Music Promoter Angioplasty Media

Burlington

Angioplasty Media's
Dan Bolles (right)

Burlington and surrounds have seemed just a bit cooler of late, it's because of indie music promoters like Angioplasty Media. The indie booking collective that rocks is responsible for bringing a staggering number of underground acts through the area, mostly upping the Queen City's indie cred.

SEVEN DAYS: You have the chance to book Ben Folds solo at the Monkey House. The show will be incredible and help fund future shows for months if not years to come. But there is a clause in the rider that states you also have to find a place for Color Me Badd to play and find them local support. One, six you do it? And two, where do book CMB and with whom?

NICK MAYDONIS: Definitely. We would be 100 percent taken on the challenge of putting on both Ben Folds and Color Me Badd. Ben Folds would be up the Monkey House — slay it. Folds is far years to come. Color Me Badd would have to be an Héro Héro set on Pearl Street. Opening set by Lowdown Meds & the Bear to Cross. Crowds would spill out into the streets. Nakedness and puking all around.

Best Vermont Stand-up Comedian Josie Leavitt (tie with Rusty DeWees)

Whether helping to develop young comedians or playing audiences of her own the mainlands of Vermont's burgeoning stand-up comedy scene is among the state's most accomplished comedians. She also owns one of Chittenden County's coolest bookstores, the Flying Pig in Shelburne.

SEVEN DAYS: Let's say NBC just picked up your pilot for a show called "Go, Ya at Josie!" It's about the many misadventures of a woman who runs a bookstore by day and does stand-up by night. Sadly, the results at NBC won't let you play the lead role, but they will let you cast it, provided it's a reasonably well-known actress. Who do you choose, and why?

JOSIE LEAVITT: Janeane Garofalo. She's really smart and seems like an actress who reads a lot. Plus, she's got enough attitude that she could handle the eight hours a day of customer service while still having a lot of laughs. She also has the right amount of it takes to forget important things sometimes, like paying the rent.

DAN BOLLES

The cast of Woody Guthrie: American Song

Justs first incarnation in Bristol in the late '70s, Lost Nation Theater performed exclusively original works. Later, it began focusing on productions that addressed social issues. Since 1989, though, Lost Nation Theater has been in residence at Henepipes City Hall, where it puts on an steady flow of shows, from classic dramas to original, Vermont-based works. For the current show, Woody Guthrie: American Song, producing artistic director Kathleen Keenan says she's gone back to her "singer-songwriter roots"—not to mention her guitar. She's had permission to come a favorite production, but some trust spring around are to kill a Mockingbird, Judgement, and Healing Our Sky.

SEVEN DAYS: What does live theater bring to a community?
KATHLEEN KEENAN: What I love about theater is it's an opportunity to work in someone else's space for a while, to be transported, to see it together and see how other people respond. Theater is a neighborhood form of storytelling. It reflects who we are... It's one of these art forms where you can go and be surrounded by a bunch of people in a really positive way. It tends to be outside ourselves and totally connected to how we're feeling and what we're thinking. It speaks to something primal.

Best Vermont Blogger
Anne Galloway
VT Digger

Referring to Anne Galloway as a blogger — and VT Digger as a blog — is a bit misleading. Since launching in the fall of 2009, Galloway's nonprofit news website has become an institution. She says a week news after investigation and a must read for Vermonters who want the inside scoop on statehouse news and politics. While establishment media continue their march toward misinformation, VT Digger has earned a solid but devoted following by digging into an issue — and usually — topics such as the state budget and health care regulations.

Loyal to its motto "Led by journalists, powered by the public," VT Digger recently launched a companion site called Tipster that aims to be a repository for Vermonters to drop anonymous tips for reporters to use in developing stories. After a big year of changes that included making a break and moving of her on Main Street in Montpelier, merging with the Vermont Journalism Trust and winning a $304,000 grant from the Knight Foundation, the next year promises even more growth — the site is hiring three new staffers including adult line reporter.

SEVEN DAYS Do you ever sleep?

ANNE GALLOWAY Oh God, I'm actually trying to get more sleep this summer. I did go for a while without much sleep. We are pretty crazy about posting its time. Its only to burn out, and I don't want to burn out.

ANDY BROTHAGE

MEDIA

What is it about TOM MEISNER? The WFTZ meteorologist, also known as Mr. Smiley — and (lovingly?) referred to by one respondent this year as "Tom Crystal Metweater" — just won his ninth consecutive Dayze.

The biggest change in the Media category this year is that we dropped the award for best publication, because, well, seven days kept winning, and that was getting kind of embarrassing. It never seemed fair, anyway, to poll our own readers, the people who — and we hope we're not being presumptuous here — we're pretty sure already like us. A lot.

For his 9th win,
WFTZ news anchor

It's a little weird, wanting to watch you get as special as others, as you did in the best general journalism category. Seven Days got local columnist DAVE TOTTEN demolished his colleagues LAUREN OBER, ERIN PICARD and DAN ROLLER — who came in the next three spots — to take home that Dayze for the third year. Oh, and he won for best Twitter feed again, too. We're just saying: Shy, watch your back.

Those of you who own a television — more than a few responded, "What's TV?" — still love the newscast on WCAE, which beat out WPTZ by more than 400 votes this year. On the radio, 65 TRIPLE X's JAMES & CHANTAL just barely held on to their three-year Dayze-winner reign — well, "they" used to be Mike & Chantal. THE PLANT'S ZUR HORING came in next for behind The Point also came this close (20 votes) to edging out four-year winner VERMONT PUBLIC RADIO for best radio station. Maybe next year, folks.

Chantal Paulino
and Jamie Scavotto

Best Local Radio DJs

Jamie & Chantal

95 Triple X

Mixing rock, Anne Scavotto and Chantal Paulino have been doing it for years. Hell, Chantal's been on the air since 1990 back when it was hard to get the overnight shift. As a result, they're pretty good at what they do: entertaining the masses, pushing people's buttons and being really obnoxious—all between their commercial rotation of Lady Gaga, Beyoncé, Mariah Carey and other pop gumballs plus "entertainment class" soapbox news and their infamous phone scams. So it's no surprise that readers once a again voted Chantal and pal the area's best local radio DJs. (Actually, a previous iteration of the popular morning drive-time show Mike & Chantal won a handful of previous Dayies.) Scavotto replaced Mike Camy in 2010.

SEVEN DAYS: Were you born this way?
JAMIE SCAVOTTO: (Laughs) Unfortunately, yes. I was born this way. (This is basically what I have to do with myself in order to maintain a sane adult radio life. I was born dysfunctional and loud, so I guess that's pretty much the only thing I have to go with.)
CHANTAL PAULINO: We, unfortunately. Well, no, I was born sunny. I was born seven pounds. I grew up in a small town in Vermont. So I guess no, I was not born this way.

Best Vintage/ Secondhand Clothing (Outside Chittenden County)

The Getup Vintage Clothing

Montpelier

If it was stylish between 1930 and 1980, there's a good chance you'll find it at the Getup. Hannah Breen owns the Montpelier store with Jeff Thompson—they closed their Burlington store there at the end of July—but the staff does feel "vintage outside" the shopside, everything they sell is from every imaginable time, including belt buckles, vintage sewing machines, clothing books, aprons, linens, super tight men's swim trunks from the 1960s, and more. And with her platinum blond, chin-length coif, she looks like she stepped right out of the 1940s or 50s.

SEVEN DAYS: When I clothing items or to those trend lines, the place do you most wish would make a newer vintage contemporary to them?

HANNAH BREEN: (Remotely I love the 1940s, the cats and the fabrics. Things were beautiful, comfortable, there was a lot of suiting, detail and pattern. There's something about it that you just don't see in clothing a lot anymore.)

MEGAN JAMES

SERVICES & STUFF

When it comes to shopping for stuff, you people know what you like. No big surprises here. Except maybe that the NEWS STORE in Montpelier finally opened Burlington's MICHAEL KENNE for best men's clothing. And that humble little UNW BROSHPH faced down the mighty Gallatin Barnes & Noble—and won. Here's to independent bookstores and, let's face it, prime Church Street real estate.

You probably thought we'd covered everything you could think to buy last year, but we didn't! So we added a few new categories, including best pet daycare (GALLINER'S DOGGIE DAYCARE), best toy store (WOODBURY MOUNTAIN TOYS) and an outside Chittenden County award for best lighting store (BAARE ELECTRIC & LIGHTING SUPPLY).

JENNIFER KAHN, who was named best Vermont caterer in 2008 before we retired the category, found her way back to a Dapier this year, taking the title of best local jewelry designer from last year's winner TIMOTHY GRANNES.

It was a tight race for financial institutions this year. Defending champion MERCHANTS BANK edged out runner-up NEW ENGLAND FEDERAL CREDIT UNION with just seven votes!

ANGLU & THE LITTLE PEARL is getting its moment in the sun. The consignment store was runner-up to RESTORE last year for best antique/secondhand store; this year, the two shops got flipped. In another watershed, the OLD SPECKS HOME is back in the game as best life shop, having lost its title to runner-up SKRACK last year. And then there are the Stowe area ever jockeying for a Dapier. This year, the best up title went to STONEPLAKE MOUNTAIN RESORT & SPA, with TOWNSEND RESORT AND SPA about 40 votes behind.

For the second year, you named PERRYWINNIE'S best jewelry store, with ZINNIA not far behind. In trying to ease your vote for that category, one of you stumbled on a moment of self-discovery: "Ray?" you suggested. "I don't know. I'm confused... maybe that's why."

In the wedding world, the INN AT SHELBOURNE FARMS and the INN AT THE ROUND BARN FARM are building tight to their best Vermont wedding venue titles, inside and outside Chittenden County, respectively. TEEN BRIDAL BOUTIQUE in Essex Junction has been the reigning bridal salon since 2004—but except for the one time this year's runner-up, SENTRY YOUNG & SINCE UPON A BRIDE, won the title. Still, one respondent remained agitated by the whole bridal salon thing, offering, "The one that actually sells brides!"

The majority of last year's winners coasted easily to another victory. PULL TANK and GOOD STUFF remain, by far, your favorite places to buy pipes and adult toys, respectively. SEVENTH GENERATION still has a reputation as the preeminent Vermont business. And you seem to sensually love the AUTOMASTER OF SHELBOURNE—does it have anything to do with that commanding name?

Kudos to GARDENERS SUPPLY and PET FOOD WAREHOUSE who each won with colorful leads of more than 600 votes. Whatever they're doing, it's clearly working.

Best Pet Daycare Gulliver's Doggie Daycare

Burlington

In 1994, Pat Clark didn't just launch what would become a hugely successful business; she named an entire industry "doggie daycare." Her once under-saturated market is now its generic in Silver Age, Zippi and Klemm. And although she lost her trademark and has since adopted the name Gulliver's Doggie Daycare, in order to differentiate her operation from similar ones, Clark's remains Vermont's favorite home-away-from-home for pups when their owners are at work or on vacation.

SEVEN DAYS So how much dog poop does your business generate?

PET CLARK The most a dog poops has weighed is 38.625 pounds on one walk. But that happened in the winter, when we have to scoop around [the pile], so we end up paying for all that snow. But it's a lot. I figure every life I've carried a ton of poop.

Best Vermont Wedding Venue (Outside Chittenden County)

The Inn at the Round Barn Farm

Windsfield

The folks at Round Barn Farm attribute the unusual design of their historic barn built in 1880 to the Shakers. The religious sect envisioned that in a round structure, "the devil can't catch you in the corners." In the barn's modern life as an events venue, the advantage is similar. At a wedding reception, you're less likely to get cornered by the groom's vendetta. Plus, without exposed beams and soaring ceilings, the place is simply gorgeous. Executive chef Charlie Penard has worked in the kitchen for 11 years, sourcing food entirely from local farms and the inn's organic gardens—unless he gets a special request, such as the time a father of the bride caught a swordfish in Florida and shipped it to Vermont the day before the wedding.

SEVEN DAYS? What's the key to giving a great wedding toast?

CHARLIE PENARD: I'm usually in the kitchen when that's happening. I have given one. I really wasn't prepared at all. That's the key: rehearse and rehearse and rehearse. I don't, and I blew it. A lot of the folks we have at the Round Barn, I don't know where they do it. They're so well spoken and thoughtful. It's a skill I just don't have.

Emily DeBenedictis

Best Toy Store Woodbury Mountain Toys

Montpelier

Trust Woodbury Mountain Toys is independently and locally owned and is often the place where kids and adults alike enter the jam-packed shop on Montpelier's State Street, all they care about is play. Emily DeBenedictis, 33, bought the toy store 11 years ago from the original owner. Luckily, her vast merch wasn't in the basement during Montpelier's flood this spring. "What's not this year?" DeBenedictis asks, assuming Emily DeBenedictis is the mother of 5-year-old twins. Kids can't tell from the outside what little plastic figures are in the store to a particular store. "So they have to take a risk," she says. Also popular is the foam Swamp Racers, which even little kids can safely load, shoot, chase and reload. Hello, America — outdoors.

SEVEN DAYS: What do you wish you could play with right now?

EMILY DEBENEDICTIS: We actually do play with toys for most of the time we're here. But it would be the "Thunder" tube. It's a musical instrument that looks sort of like a drum with a long string attached to it. It is secret. It makes these very dramatic, satisfying thunderclaps.

Best Place to Rent a Movie (Outside Chittenden County) Downstairs Video

Montpelier

Two of Vermont's remaining indie video stores have names that bear witness to their longevity — and their mobility. Just as Burlington's Waterfront Video isn't on the waterfront anymore, Montpelier's Downstairs Video isn't downstairs. When Terrence Youk bought the Swoxy Theater from Rick Winston and Andrew Semko in 2009, he transformed its basement into a second screening room. (Swoxy's VHSes moved to 7-Eleven's former juke joint as Montpelier's Capital Video closed its doors — making Youk's store the city's only survivalist movie source besides Redbox.) "Our business went up like 45 percent from what it had ever been," Youk says. Now he can offer cinema-prize rare films from Winston's VHS collection while also renting blockbusters to a broader clientele.

SEVENDAYS How do you keep a video store alive in the age of Netflix instant downloads?

TERRENCE YOK It's access to bandwidth. A lot of people in the area just don't have it for streaming. If you're on dial-up, perusing the Netflix catalog can be torture. There's also a certain percentage of people who like to walk around and pick up something physically. I'd like to keep it going, because it's almost like a public archive. We have a lot of things you wouldn't see in another video store. I really thought [the shop] would be pretty cool, but the truth is, it's helping its own. We're not getting rich, but we're certainly thriving.

Best Antique/Secondhand Store Anjou & the Little Pear Burlington

Two years ago just before Jess Ackerman opened her consignment store on Burlington's Main Street, she explored an unsavory home to seven days (plus Anyouers are "careful with a bit of green." So too the store, which exemplifies the green practices of recycling old furniture and home goods and "upcycling" old products into new ones. (Besides selling original art, Anjou carries some upcycled creations of local artists and craftsmen.) Today the room's 4000 square feet are a great place to browse through a century of changing fashions in home decor: the popular mid-century-themed Modern Love room offers everything from a sleek Danish Modern table to a 1970 Space Invaders board game. Ackerman says she loves the "treasure hunt" aspect of her business. "You never know what's going to come through the door."

SEVEN DAYS: How do you decide on a price for the used items people bring in?
JESS ACKERMAN: We come up with a price together. Because I've been open two years, I start to have a sense on what sells and what doesn't. We look things up if I don't. A lot of times it will depend on the consignor and how quickly they want to move it along. A lot of people don't know what something's worth, but I'll give them my best guess or surprise them with a bigger check than they were expecting.
